

News for the health and care system

07 Dec 2016

We're delighted to launch a new suite of interactive maps showing progress on sustainable development across the country. The maps show how the health and care system is performing across a range of areas including energy, water, waste, planning and reporting. You can compare regions' performance (both NHS and PHE) and see how things have changed over time.

The maps are a first of their kind and we'll be updating them annually - so we hope you'll find them useful now and in the future. Start using them here.

Thank you to all our colleagues supporting sustainable development across the health and care sector. It's been a challenging and exciting year – we look forward to an even better 2017!
